WHY IS MONEY GREEN?

In 1861, as a means of financing the American Civil War, the federal government began issuing paper money. The back sides of the new bills were printed in green ink as an anti-counterfeiting measure, as photographic technology of the day could not reproduce color.

The color green was chosen because, according to the U.S. Bureau of Printing and Engraving, the ink was plentiful and durable and green was seen as a symbol of stability.
